

Staying Home™ is a structural blue print training model for an effective offender reentry system. The model is designed to bring youth and young adults involved with the criminal justice system together with their communities and implement effective practices that will support successful offender outcomes.

Three phases of offender management: Institutional → Transitional → Community Stabilization. The Staying Home™ management structure begins at the transitional phase. It continues into the community stabilization phase following release to provide accountability, evidence-based support services to offenders in their community, and engage their families in the process.
